Senator Foraker has been mentioned for Vice President in 1904, and it is announced that his acceptance would please President Roosevelt. Would it also please Senator Hanna?

The Democratic Congressional convention of the Eighth Ohio district endorsed the Kansas City platform and nominated Mr. W. R. Nevins, of Bellefontaine, for Congress. This was a good day's work.

Colonel Henry Watterson has declined to accept a nomination for Governor of Kentucky. Some of the Akron Colonels who can't get an office in these parts might be willing to take the hint from Kentucky.

Anthrax has advanced to $9 a ton in New York. The coal trust could recoup its strike losses and make things interesting for the consumer by maintaining the present level of prices after the strike is settled.

The nomination of Gov. Crane for the chairmanship of the Republican National committee was not taken very seriously, especially in Ohio. When Mr. Hanna is ready to retire from the chairmanship he can find his logical successor at Akron, Ohio.

"He achieved results in Congress by painstaking committee work rather than by brilliant speech upon the floor of the Senate," is one of the good things said of the late Senator McMillan, of Michigan, by a biographer. "Brilliant speech" upon the floor of Congress has lost its prestige in this day. It changes no votes.

A Stark county judge has set aside a number of additions which the Decennial Board of Appraisal made to the tax valuation of Stark county property, holding that the Board had not given proper notice to the property owners of its intention to increase the values. No taxpayer is ever heard objecting to a reduction of values, notice or no notice.

NO HOPE OF REPUBLICAN REVISION.

(From the Springfield Republican.)

The Republican Congressional campaign book is receiving a wide distribution, say the Washington dispatches. This book ignores the Cuban reciprocity issue and the tariff trust issue. These are questions which the party will avoid as much as possible in the campaign. Senator Platt of New York appeared in yesterday's papers as saying that the Republican convention of that state will not "bother with federal issues," which is another way of saying that the party does not care to be drawn into a fight over tariff revision or tariff reform, either for reciprocity with Cuba or for depriving the trusts of the shelter of high custom rates. Gen. Grosvenor of Ohio, one of the party leaders in Congress, on being renominated Saturday, said that "when the proper time comes" the tariff schedules will be overhauled and such changes will be made as are deemed necessary. The Republican party could be trusted to attend to the business at the right time, and it was a work that the people should never permit the Democracy to undertake.

We have to go further west than Ohio to find any marked symptoms of Republican dissatisfaction with the tariff, and they are sporadic. The Iowa convention stands pretty much alone. Here and there Republican candidates for Congress will talk in favor of revision as against the trusts, but the party as a whole will evade the question. So much is now evident. Its recognized leaders will talk of revision as something to be undertaken at the "proper time," but when that time is no one will be informed. Obviously, as the question is to be excluded from this campaign as far as possible, the "proper time" will not come in the life of the Congress to be elected this fall. That puts revision over for at least two years, and until after the presidential election of 1904. Meantime the trusts can make the most of their protection.

But can the Republican party be trusted to revise the tariff when the "proper time" comes, or to consider any time as proper within the lifetime of this generation? And if so, revision which way? Down or up? The answer of experience is not promising. Years ago the party used to admit the necessity of reform and modification of the war tariff. It made some reduction in 1872, and annulled it in 1875. By 1882 it had got around to the concession of a revision through a tariff commission, but the resulting modification of 1883, as every one knows, amounted to nothing. Then came the accentuation of the issue by President Cleveland's tariff reform message of 1887, and what Republican tariff "revision" then meant was shown in the enactment of the McKinley law of 1890, making the protective rates higher than ever. We had another sample of Republican "revision" in 1897, when the Dingley law was passed, imposing rates even more extreme than the McKinley rates. Is "revision at the proper time" now to be understood as meaning a further advance in rates instead of a modification?

Thus by trusting the party to revise at the proper time, the whole question is left in the dark, and will be kept there by the Republican leaders. There is doubt of what is meant by "revision." There is greater doubt as to the time. And the conclusion must be that no intention exists on the part of those now in power to permit any revision, except possibly one in an upward direction—one that will give even greater shelter to the trusts than they have under the Dingley law.

If, then, the country needs and wants a reform of the tariff schedules, how is it to be obtained, except through the opposition party? The people appear to be talking of this reform as something that needs to be done, especially in view of the rise of the trusts. The Republican leaders appear to admit as much, and warn the people not to trust the Democracy to undertake the job. But they decline to say that they will undertake it in the near future—and there we are. It is evident that revision and reform of a modifying character are not to be expected from the party in power. Long experience goes to prove this. The party's entanglement with the protected interests is evidently so deep as to make reform impossible from that source, now as in the past. If reform of the tariff is to come, it must come through an opposition party. And thus it will come when the country is ready for it. Whether that is the case today remains to be determined.

ILLITERATES

In Great Numbers Flocking to This Country.

Altoona, Aug. 14.—Pennsylvania officials in this city estimate that all previous records in moving immigrants Westward have been broken since April 1. An average of 400 daily have passed through Altoona, making the grand total for the summer approximately 50,000. Of these 10,000 have located in the soft coal fields and the Conneautville coke regions. Most of the immigrants are illiterates from Eastern Europe.

MAY AND "PUTTY."

The Notorious Pair Have Forgotten Their Anger and Are Happy.

London, Aug. 14.—In a communication from Lisbon, dated Sunday, Aug. 10, the correspondent of the Daily Express says that May Yohe and Putnam Strong are living happily together at the Avenida hotel as Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson. In an interview with the correspondent, Strong said: "Miss Yohe arrived here Wednesday, Aug. 6, in response to my telegraphic request that she come. We are perfectly happy and intend to marry."

Strong denied that there had been any collusion between Miss Yohe and himself, that he had pawned the Smith sword of honor or borrowed money from his father's friends.

Miss Yohe looked well and confirmed Strong's statement. She said: "I was glad to come to Lisbon. We are perfectly happy and I hope our troubles are now ended." Strong looks thinner than he used to, but he has recovered from his illness.

and family, Lorain; Peter Schwalbach and family, Doylestown; Mrs. James Smith and daughter, of Canton. In all the guests numbered 75. Officers were elected as follows: President, Frank Schwalbach; corresponding secretary, Miss Minnie Zwilling. It was decided to hold the next annual reunion at Silver lake the first week in August, 1903.

STRUCK BY CAR.

Occupants Knocked From Wagon and Hurt.

Mr. Wm. McCourt is in bed as the result of a street car accident. With his driver, John Williams, he started in a wagon to cross the street car tracks at Barges st. It was at 10 o'clock at night, and they couldn't see a car in sight. As soon, however, as they got onto the tracks, a car came along and Mr. McCourt ordered the driver to hurry the horses as fast as he could. The horses got off the track, but the wagon was struck and both men knocked off. Mr. McCourt was bruised considerably, and the driver was shaken up. The wagon, a night soil outfit, was damaged, too.

PREACHER'S CRIME.

Killed Two Men Who Made Accusations Against Him.

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 14.—Rev. Whig Duncan, a Baptist minister, well known in Scott county, shot and killed two brothers by the name of Tramwell, near Winfield. The news of the double tragedy reached here last night. It is reported that the Tramwells assaulted Duncan, whom they charged with having been unduly intimate with the elder Tramwell's wife. Duncan denied the charge and repeatedly warned the men to desist from the assault they were making on him with heavy sticks. He managed to get away, and stepping back several paces drew his revolver and fired, killing both. Duncan is reported to have fled to the mountains.

MAY ABDICATE.

Czar Has Seriously Expressed That Intention.

Moscow, Aug. 14.—The report is current in the highest official circles that the Czar has seriously expressed to his intimate counselors his desire to abdicate in favor of his brother, the Grand Duke Tzarevitch Michael Alexandrovitch.

His majesty is said to have become utterly disheartened at the internal condition of the country. He has neither the will power nor the physical strength to contend with the situation with the retrogressive entourage by which he is surrounded.

The Czarina's accompaniment is expected next month, and if she does not present the Czar with an heir his decision to abdicate will probably become irrevocable.

In the old days when little girls were impolite and forgot their manners they were soundly spanked by their mammas or their papas. Had this time-honored punishment been judiciously administered to Mary MacLane she would probably be happier now and so would her folks.

Considered from some standpoints, it is really a misfortune for a boy to be named William. When he becomes a man, the old folks who knew him when a boy will almost invariably continue to call him "Willie." There are scores of elderly people in Akron who talk about "Willie" Doyle.

The Sluggish-Livered Conductor on the West Market st. car threw aside his pessimistic robes Thursday morning and caused the habits of the last three seats in the open car to forget the dark brown taste and other troubles. The man with the brass buttons and blue uniform told a story, which is true.

"I saw the funniest" (here one of the young men in the last three seats let his pipe fall to the floor from surprise) "sight yesterday afternoon," said the sluggish-livered gentleman, "It came mighty near being a serious one, too. A youth of 23, who said he was from some small town in Holmes county, tried to board my car at Exchange st., and his manner reminded me of the time when I was a boy in Kansas, attempting to crawl up the side of a straw stack. That was his manner of attempting to board the car and if I had not grabbed him by his left leg and pulled him up on the platform, there would have been a serious story. As it was, I was pretty hot."

"Did you never see a street car before?" I asked.

"Not until yesterday," the youth replied, "and they're darned funny things, too, ain't they?"

NEVER, OH NEVER!

And now it is said that Congressman Dick has an eye on a seat in the United States Senate. Was there ever a time since he began his career as Auditor of Summit county when Dick didn't have an eye on?

Attached Promoter's Panama and He Paid Up.

St. Louis, Aug. 14.—Miss Nettie Wright, a stenographer in the office of Richard Respass, the promoter of a World's Fair get-rich-quick scheme, held for two hours the $50 Panama hat of the alleged capitalist until he paid her in cash $12.

Respass, according to police who are investigating his scheme, has operated before in Chicago and in Pittsburgh.

Before the latest denouement between 12 and 15 young women stenographers had been employed in the Respass offices. Now only two remain.

According to the prospectus this promoter treats schemes which he declares involve billions of dollars with the utmost nonchalance. One scheme which he has under way is a million dollar hotel at Twelfth and Olive sts.

last three weeks, more than 100,000 boxes of lemons have been sold at the seizure rooms of the appraisers' stores by the government because the importers declined to pay duty on them. Ex-Coroner Zucca, one of the heaviest importers of lemons in this country, gives these reasons for the unpopularity of lemons:

"First of all, the gin rickey has supplanted as a summer drink the gin fizz, which was made with lemon juice," he said. "Then the Scotch or Irish high ball has become an almost universal drink and has killed the whiskey sour as a morning bracer, which also has a basis of lemon."
